VII. INTERVIEWS WITH HARRY GOLD

At Lewisburg, Pa.

On June 24, 1958, HARRY GOLD, inmate, U.S. Penitentiary, a convicted espionage agent, was interviewed by SA THOMAS E. SAUNDERS.

GOLD was exhibited all available photographs of the subject, one of which was believed to be current as of January 1957.

Concerning this photograph, GOLD stated that the individual picture was exactly as he imagined his former Soviet contact of 1935-1936 would look at the present time. He stated that his former Soviet contact, known to him as PAUL SMITH, had the same general characteristics of JOSEPH GRENBORG; however, he could not positively state that GRENBORG is identical with the former contact. He said that it is possible, but he doubted that they were identical and would not say so until such time that he can make a positive identification. GOLD stated he is still sure that if he were to observe a photograph of SMITH as he appeared during the period that he had contact with him that he could still, at this date, effect a positive identification and is most anxious to do so.

GOLD stated that he never knew a person named YETTA SPIGLER and could not associate that name with any of his former acquaintances in the Philadelphia area. He stated that he never met anyone by the name of EMANUEL KLINE. He explained that a DANIEL KLINE of Philadelphia was a former classmate in high school of his brother, JOSEPH GOLD, and through DANIEL KLINE's visits at the GOLD home, he learned that DANIEL's father's name was EMANUEL, that he was a real estate dealer in the South Philadelphia area, and that he was now deceased.

GOLD advised that to his knowledge there was no relationship between YETTA SPIGLER and EMANUEL KLINE and that he was totally unaware of the other members of the KLINE family, other than EMANUEL and DANIEL KLINE, and that he only knew DANIEL KLINE through his visits to the GOLD home in Philadelphia with HARRY's brother, JOSEPH GOLD.

HARRY GOLD advised that the successor of PAUL SMITH, "Little FRED," was pressuring him to obtain a source of information at the Philadelphia Navy Yard. GOLD learned through his conversations with DANIEL KLINE that he was, during that period, employed at the Philadelphia Navy Yard and thereafter had suggested his name to "Little FRED" as a possible recruit for Soviet intelligence. He stated that he has often times since regretted having furnished DANIEL's name to "Little FRED" and had furnished the name under pressure as this was a means at that time of getting "Little FRED" off his neck. GOLD definitely did not approach DANIEL KLINE himself and had no knowledge as to whether any of the Soviets had contacted DANIEL KLINE. He never received any information or indication from DANIEL KLINE that he was ever contacted by the Soviets and to his knowledge he may be "OK," but he pointed out that it is very unlikely that any of his Soviet superiors would have informed him of the fact that DANIEL KLINE had been recruited, if such had been the case.

When first questioned as to his knowledge of JERRY or JEROME KLINE, GOLD stated that he seemed to recall that such a person existed; however, he could not recall ever meeting him or talking to him and could not recall where he was employed, or if he was any relation to DANIEL KLINE.

GOLD recalled that he had worked for ABRAHAM BROTHMAN at New York City during the period May 1946 to June 1948 at his own laboratory and that BROTHMAN operated a consulting engineering firm. He stated that it was prior to this time that BROTHMAN had been giving information to GOLD to pass on to his Soviet superiors, roughly the period October 1941 to 1943. GOLD further remarked that this was one of the unfortunate situations that had developed, that is, his going to work for BROTHMAN after the previous relationship with him. GOLD stated that BROTHMAN in the fall of 1947 and continuing on through 1948, had done some work for Mr. MIKE STANTON of Stanton Laboratories, Philadelphia, Pa. He explained that his old friend, THOMAS BLACK, at that time an employee of CHARLES BERG, had recommended to STANTON that BROTHMAN's firm might be able to be of assistance to STANTON. He explained that STANTON was involved in the manufacture of thioglycollic acid, an acid used in cold wave preparations and in high demand at that time. He stated that BLACK knew that GOLD was at that time associated with BROTHMAN and since STANTON needed a new plant design to manufacture his product, BLACK, out of loyalty to GOLD, had suggested BROTHMAN's firm to STANTON. He stated that so far as he knew, STANTON's association with BLACK was purely a business association, as was STANTON's association with BROTHMAN and that to his knowledge, STANTON was perfectly "all right."

GOLD recalled that during the period 1948, BROTHMAN was desperate for money. He stated that about June 1948, he, himself, and other employees of BROTHMAN, quit the firm over a wage dispute, and that he personally had been under the impression that he was an associate of BROTHMAN in the business. He stated that the only time he was an "associate" was when business was bad, but when business was good, he was merely an "employee."

GOLD advised that shortly after he had terminated his association with BROTHMAN in June 1948, MIKE STANTON had called him to his house and asked GOLD as to whether he thought he should continue his association with BROTHMAN in the re-designing of his factory. GOLD stated that as he recalled he had advised STANTON that he had so much money invested in BROTHMAN at that time that he might as well continue with him and see if he couldn't recover as much as possible. He stated it was at this time that he now recalls that STANTON had complained to him regarding the large sum of money that he had loaned to BROTHMAN. GOLD at this point stated that he now thinks that it was at this time that he first heard the name of JEROME or JERRY KLINE mentioned, and that it had been JERRY KLINE who was instrumental in BROTHMAN obtaining the loan from Stanton Laboratories; however, he did not at that time associate JERRY KLINE with DANIEL KLINE mentioned above. GOLD pointed out that the KLINE name is a common name in the Philadelphia area, and he never gave the matter any thought that JERRY KLINE and DANIEL KLINE could be related.

GOLD stated that he has never known anyone by the name of JOSEPH GRENBORG, and as previously indicated, cannot positively state that the photographs of GRENBORG are identical with the person he knew as PAUL SMITH, his former Soviet contact. He stated further that he has absolutely no knowledge of the association between BROTHMAN and JEROME KLINE and that he definitely did not place JEROME KLINE in contact with BROTHMAN.

GOLD stated that he wished to comment that his former Soviet contact, known to him as PAUL SMITH, impressed him as being the person responsible for setting up industrial espionage in the United States during that period. He stated that SMITH did not impress him as the type of person that would be engaged in a menial job as a cover to his true occupation and he based this on the fact that SMITH was always well dressed, well rested, very smooth and polished, and to GOLD's knowledge, this person's only contact was Amtorg. As previously indicated, GOLD stated that he is still confident that he will be able to positively identify a photograph of his first contact, if shown one, even at this late date.

On July 28, 1958, HARRY GOLD was again interviewed by SA SAUNDERS. On this occasion GOLD was shown some additional photographs of the subject, one of which was designated photograph #2, having been furnished by Confidential Informant T-4 on April 30, 1958. Concerning this photograph, GOLD remarked, "This looks

"an awful lot like PAUL SMITH, but the face is a little long. The photograph doesn't eliminate him as not being identical with SMITH. Everything in the photograph looks like the man I remember except the head is a little long, making the face appear long. The only thing that bothers me is the length of the face. You definitely should not eliminate this person as not being identical with PAUL SMITH." GOLD further commented that photograph #2 to him depicted a certain amount of coarseness which he does not associate with PAUL SMITH. GOLD stated that he just could not positively identify the person in photograph #2 as being identical with PAUL SMITH; however, he felt, as indicated above, that this person should not be eliminated.

Residence

GOLD stated he has no direct knowledge of SMITH's residence during the time SMITH was contacting him. He stated that he assumes that SMITH resided in the vicinity of Broadway in the 80's or 90's, and he based this on the fact that most of his meets with SMITH were in this vicinity.

Employment

GOLD stated that he gained the impression that the only employment SMITH had when he was contacting him was at Amtorg. He stated that SMITH did not seem to have a job where he reported to a desk at a given time, and he based this statement regarding the association with Amtorg on the fact that on one occasion when blueprints were turned over to SMITH, SMITH told GOLD that he was going to take them to Amtorg and have them reproduced. SMITH had them reproduced and returned them to GOLD the same day they were delivered to him. GOLD stated that SMITH never mentioned any "cover" employment to him and never conveyed to GOLD the thought that he was employed at anything other than his espionage activities. GOLD stated that SMITH never conveyed to him the impression that he would ever perform servile type labor, in particular that of a waiter, and to GOLD this type of employment was not the type of work that he would associate with SMITH's personality. He pointed out further that SMITH never seemed to be in a hurry, was always well dressed, and always appeared well rested.

Drinking Habits

GOLD advised that when he and SMITH did drink together they always drank Canadian Club whiskey. GOLD stated that he personally used ginger ale as a mixer and SMITH, without fail, always used soda. He said that on rare occasions they would drink Scotch whiskey, and on those occasions SMITH would use the same mixer. He said he cannot at this time recall the names of the bars where he and SMITH did their drinking. GOLD further advised that SMITH impressed him as a moderate drinker, and he had never observed him to drink anything other than mentioned above. GOLD said it was his recollection that SMITH was having stomach trouble, possibly an ulcer, and for that reason he did not drink to excess at the time he knew him.

Eating Habits

SMITH, according to GOLD, frequently ate at Child's Restaurant located on Columbus Circle, New York City. He stated that one of the waitresses at Child's apparently knew him and SMITH would often take a card from his pocket which contained his diet and would order from the menu on this card. He recalled that SMITH did not go in for rich foods but usually ate something that was easily digested like lamb chops or baked ham and did not eat fancy dressings or side courses. He said that it was while eating with SMITH on one occasion that SMITH spoke to one of the waitresses in what he was told was the Danish language.

Reading Habits

GOLD stated he has no direct knowledge of SMITH's reading habits but gained the impression that SMITH was a well read man. GOLD has nothing to back up this statement other than SMITH's mannerisms and demeanor during their meetings.

Smoking Habits

GOLD stated that when he knew SMITH, he was strictly a cigarette smoker; however, he could not recall the brand. GOLD stated that he never observed SMITH to smoke anything other than cigarettes and recalled that he was what he considered to be a heavy smoker.

Entertainment Habits

GOLD advised he has no knowledge of SMITH's entertainment habits; however, SMITH impressed him as a person who would go to the theater or the movies. He said SMITH did not impress him as the "sport" type and never heard him mention anything about attending sporting events of any type, in particular the race track. GOLD said that this type of activity is completely foreign to the type of man that he supposed SMITH to be.

Dress and Personal Notes

GOLD said that SMITH was a very neat dresser and wore what he thought to be expensive clothes as they fit too well to be ready-made. He recalled that SMITH had a habit of, after eating a meal, to place both hands flat on his belt and hitch his pants up. He said SMITH walked quite slowly and with the toes pointed out, but not quite to the point of a "duck waddle." He recalled that SMITH came down "heavy" on his feet, almost like a marcher. He said that it is a very outstanding walk to him. GOLD further advised that SMITH, to his recollection, did not wear glasses and to his knowledge did not wear dentures. He said he has no knowledge of the brand names of any toilet articles used by SMITH. However, he recalls that SMITH was always cleanly shaven.

GOLD stated that he cannot honestly recall whether SMITH had a mole on his left cheek or not. GOLD did recall that while walking, SMITH leaned a little forward.

GOLD stated he could recall that SMITH usually wore gray or brown suits with a little blue but not a dark blue. He lastly recalled that SMITH impressed him as being a shrewd, intelligent and educated individual who would not "stick out" in a group of cultured people. However, GOLD believed that SMITH had not received too much formal higher education.

GOLD said that SMITH was a very neat dresser and wore what he thought to be expensive clothes as they fit too well to be ready-made. He recalled that SMITH had a habit of, after eating a meal, to place both hands flat on his belt and hitch his pants up. He said SMITH walked quite slowly and with the toes pointed out, but not quite to the point of a "duck waddle." He recalled that SMITH came down "heavy" on his feet, almost like a marcher. He said that it is a very outstanding walk to him. GOLD further advised that SMITH, to his recollection, did not wear glasses and to his knowledge did not wear dentures. He said he has no knowledge of the brand names of any toilet articles used by SMITH. However, he recalls that SMITH was always cleanly shaven.

GOLD stated that he cannot honestly recall whether SMITH had a mole on his left cheek or not. GOLD did recall that while walking, SMITH leaned a little forward.

GOLD stated he could recall that SMITH usually wore gray or brown suits with a little blue but not a dark blue. He lastly recalled that SMITH impressed him as being a shrewd, intelligent and educated individual who would not "stick out" in a group of cultured people. However, GOLD believed that SMITH had not received too much formal higher education.

VII. INTERVIEWS WITH HARRY GOLD

At Lewisburg, Pa.

On June 24, 1958, HARRY GOLD, inmate, U.S. Penitentiary, a convicted espionage agent, was interviewed by SA THOMAS E. SAUNDERS.

GOLD was exhibited all available photographs of the subject, one of which was believed to be current as of January 1957.

PH 105-3441

Concerning this photograph, GOLD stated that the individual picture was exactly as he imagined his former Soviet contact of 1935-1936 would look at the present time. He stated that his former Soviet contact, known to him as PAUL SMITH, had the same general characteristics of JOSEPH GRENBORG; however, he could not positively state that GRENBORG is identical with the former contact. He said that it is possible, but he doubted that they were identical and would not say so until such time that he can make a positive identification. GOLD stated he is still sure that if he were to observe a photograph of SMITH as he appeared during the period that he had contact with him that he could still, at this date, effect a positive identification and is most anxious to do so.

GOLD stated that he never knew a person named YETTA SPIGLER and could not associate that name with any of his former acquaintances in the Philadelphia area. He stated that he never met anyone by the name of EMANUEL KLINE. He explained that a DANIEL KLINE of Philadelphia was a former classmate in high school of his brother, JOSEPH GOLD, and through DANIEL KLINE's visits at the GOLD home, he learned that DANIEL's father's name was EMANUEL, that he was a real estate dealer in the South Philadelphia area, and that he was now deceased.

GOLD advised that to his knowledge there was no relationship between YETTA SPIGLER and EMANUEL KLINE and that he was totally unaware of the other members of the KLINE family, other than EMANUEL and DANIEL KLINE, and that he only knew DANIEL KLINE through his visits to the GOLD home in Philadelphia with HARRY's brother, JOSEPH GOLD.

HARRY GOLD advised that the successor of PAUL SMITH, "Little FRED," was pressuring him to obtain a source of information at the Philadelphia Navy Yard. GOLD learned through his conversations with DANIEL KLINE that he was, during that period, employed at the Philadelphia Navy Yard and thereafter had suggested his name to "Little FRED" as a possible recruit for Soviet intelligence. He stated that he has often times since regretted having furnished DANIEL's name to "Little FRED" and had furnished the name under pressure as this was a means at that time of getting "Little FRED" off his neck. GOLD definitely did not approach DANIEL KLINE himself and had no knowledge as to whether any of the Soviets had contacted DANIEL KLINE. He never received any information or indication from DANIEL KLINE that he was ever contacted by the Soviets and to his knowledge he may be "OK," but he pointed out that it is very unlikely that any of his Soviet superiors would have informed him of the fact that DANIEL KLINE had been recruited, if such had been the case.

When first questioned as to his knowledge of JERRY, or JEROME KLINE, GOLD stated that he seemed to recall that such a person existed; however, he could not recall ever meeting him or talking to him and could not recall where he was employed, or if he was any relation to DANIEL KLINE.

GOLD recalled that he had worked for ABRAHAM BROTHMAN at New York City during the period May 1946 to June 1948 at his own laboratory and that BROTHMAN operated a consulting engineering firm. He stated that it was prior to this time that BROTHMAN had been giving information to GOLD to pass on to his Soviet superiors, roughly the period October 1941 to 1943. GOLD further remarked that this was one of the unfortunate situations that had developed, that is, his going to work for BROTHMAN after the previous relationship with him. GOLD stated that BROTHMAN in the fall of 1947 and continuing on through 1948, had done some work for Mr. MIKE STANTON of Stanton Laboratories, Philadelphia, Pa. He explained that his old friend, THOMAS BLACK, at that time an employee of CHARLES BERG, had recommended to STANTON that BROTHMAN's firm might be able to be of assistance to STANTON. He explained that STANTON was involved in the manufacture of thioglycollic acid, an acid used in cold wave preparations and in high demand at that time. He stated that BLACK knew that GOLD was at that time associated with BROTHMAN and since STANTON needed a new plant design to manufacture his product, BLACK, out of loyalty to GOLD, had suggested BROTHMAN's firm to STANTON. He stated that so far as he knew, STANTON's association with BLACK was purely a business association, as was STANTON's association with BROTHMAN and that to his knowledge, STANTON was perfectly "all right."

GOLD recalled that during the period 1948, BROTHMAN was desperate for money. He stated that about June 1948, he, himself, and other employees of BROTHMAN, quit the firm over a wage dispute, and that he personally had been under the impression that he was an associate of BROTHMAN in the business. He stated that the only time he was an "associate" was when business was bad, but when business was good, he was merely an "employee."

GOLD advised that shortly after he had terminated his association with BROTHMAN in June 1948, MIKE STANTON had called him to his house and asked GOLD as to whether he thought he should continue his association with BROTHMAN in the re-designing of his factory. GOLD stated that as he recalled he had advised STANTON that he had so much money invested in BROTHMAN at that time that he might as well continue with him and see if he couldn't recover as much as possible. He stated it was at this time that he now recalls that STANTON had complained to him regarding the large sums of money that he had loaned to BROTHMAN. GOLD at this point stated that he now thinks that it was at this time that he first heard the name of JEROME or JERRY KLINE mentioned, and that it had been JERRY KLINE who was instrumental in BROTHMAN obtaining the loan from Stanton Laboratories; however, he did not at that time associate JERRY KLINE with DANIEL KLINE mentioned above. GOLD pointed out that the KLINE name is a common name in the Philadelphia area, and he never gave the matter any thought that JERRY KLINE and DANIEL KLINE could be related.

GOLD stated that he has never known anyone by the name of JOSEPH GRENBORG, and as previously indicated, cannot positively state that the photographs of GRENBORG are identical with the person he knew as PAUL SMITH, his former Soviet contact. He stated further that he has absolutely no knowledge of the association between BROTHMAN and JEROME KLINE and that he definitely did not place JEROME KLINE in contact with BROTHMAN.

GOLD stated that he wished to comment that his former Soviet contact, known to him as PAUL SMITH, impressed him as being the person responsible for setting up industrial espionage in the United States during that period. He stated that SMITH did not impress him as the type of person that would be engaged in a menial job as a cover to his true occupation and he based this on the fact that SMITH was always well dressed, well rested, very smooth and polished, and to GOLD's knowledge, this person's only contact was Amtorg. As previously indicated, GOLD stated that he is still confident that he will be able to positively identify a photograph of his first contact, if shown one, even at this late date.

On July 28, 1958, HARRY GOLD was again interviewed by SA SAUNDERS. On this occasion GOLD was shown some additional photographs of the subject, one of which was designated photograph #2, having been furnished by Confidential Informant T-4 on April 30, 1958. Concerning this photograph, GOLD remarked, "This looks

"an awful lot like PAUL SMITH, but the face is a little long. The photograph doesn't eliminate him as not being identical with SMITH. Everything in the photograph looks like the man I remember except the head is a little long, making the face appear long. The only thing that bothers me is the length of the face. You definitely should not eliminate this person as not being identical with PAUL SMITH." GOLD further commented that photograph #2 to him depicted a certain amount of coarseness which he does not associate with PAUL SMITH. GOLD stated that he just could not positively identify the person in photograph #2 as being identical with PAUL SMITH; however, he felt, as indicated above, that this person should not be eliminated.

Residence

GOLD stated he has no direct knowledge of SMITH's residence during the time SMITH was contacting him. He stated that he assumes that SMITH resided in the vicinity of Broadway in the 80's or 90's, and he based this on the fact that most of his meets with SMITH were in this vicinity.

Employment

GOLD stated that he gained the impression that the only employment SMITH had when he was contacting him was at Amtorg. He stated that SMITH did not seem to have a job where he reported to a desk at a given time, and he based this statement regarding the association with Amtorg on the fact that on one occasion when blueprints were turned over to SMITH, SMITH told GOLD that he was going to take them to Amtorg and have them reproduced. SMITH had them reproduced and returned them to GOLD the same day they were delivered to him. GOLD stated that SMITH never mentioned any "cover" employment to him and never conveyed to GOLD the thought that he was employed at anything other than his espionage activities. GOLD stated that SMITH never conveyed to him the impression that he would ever perform servile type labor, in particular that of a waiter, and to GOLD this type of employment was not the type of work that he would associate with SMITH's personality. He pointed out further that SMITH never seemed to be in a hurry, was always well dressed, and always appeared well rested.

Drinking Habits

GOLD advised that when he and SMITH did drink together they always drank Canadian Club whiskey. GOLD stated that he personally used ginger ale as a mixer and SMITH, without fail, always used soda. He said that on rare occasions they would drink Scotch whiskey, and on those occasions SMITH would use the same mixer. He said he cannot at this time recall the names of the bars where he and SMITH did their drinking. GOLD further advised that SMITH impressed him as a moderate drinker and he had never observed him to drink anything other than mentioned above. GOLD said it was his recollection that SMITH was having stomach trouble, possibly an ulcer, and for that reason he did not drink to excess at the time he knew him.

Eating Habits

SMITH, according to GOLD, frequently ate at Child's Restaurant located on Columbus Circle, New York City. He stated that one of the waitresses at Child's apparently knew him and SMITH would often take a card from his pocket which contained his diet and would order from the menu on this card. He recalled that SMITH did not go in for rich foods but usually ate something that was easily digested like lamb chops or baked ham and did not eat fancy dressings or side courses. He said that it was while eating with SMITH on one occasion that SMITH spoke to one of the waitresses in what he was told was the Danish language.

Reading Habits

GOLD stated he has no direct knowledge of SMITH's reading habits but gained the impression that SMITH was a well read man. GOLD has nothing to back up this statement other than SMITH's mannerisms and demeanor during their meetings.

Smoking Habits

GOLD stated that when he knew SMITH, he was strictly a cigarette smoker; however, he could not recall the brand. GOLD stated that he never observed SMITH to smoke anything other than cigarettes and recalled that he was what he considered to be a heavy smoker.

PH 105-3441

Entertainment Habits

GOLD advised he has no knowledge of SMITH's entertainment habits; however, SMITH impressed him as a person who would go to the theater or the movies. He said SMITH did not impress him as the "sport" type and never heard him mention anything about attending sporting events of any type, in particular the race track. GOLD said that this type of activity is completely foreign to the type of man that he supposed SMITH to be.

Dress and Personal Notes

GOLD said that SMITH was a very neat dresser and wore what he thought to be expensive clothes as they fit too well to be ready-made. He recalled that SMITH had a habit of, after eating a meal, to place both hands flat on his belt and hitch his pants up. He said SMITH walked quite slowly and with the toes pointed out, but not quite to the point of a "duck waddle." He recalled that SMITH came down "heavy" on his feet, almost like a marcher. He said that it is a very outstanding walk to him. GOLD further advised that SMITH, to his recollection, did not wear glasses and to his knowledge did not wear dentures. He said he has no knowledge of the brand names of any toilet articles used by SMITH. However, he recalls that SMITH was always cleanly shaven.

GOLD stated that he cannot honestly recall whether SMITH had a mole on his left cheek or not. GOLD did recall that while walking, SMITH leaned a little forward.

GOLD stated he could recall that SMITH usually wore gray or brown suits with a little blue but not a dark blue. He lastly recalled that SMITH impressed him as being a shrewd, intelligent and educated individual who would not "stick out" in a group of cultured people. However, GOLD believed that SMITH had not received too much formal higher education.

MARKUS EPSTEIN, electrical engineer, advised Special Agents EDWARD J. CAHILL and ROBERT F. ROYAL on January 8, 1953, that he had been a trainee in the Civilian Training School, Fort Monmouth, New Jersey, in October, 1940, and that two of his other classmates were the above WALKER and JULIUS ROSENBERG. EPSTEIN stated that many of his group were assigned to the Philadelphia area upon the completion of the course and that about March of 1941 ROSENBERG and WALKER moved into an apartment in Philadelphia in which he was a co-tenant. To the best of his recollection, ROSENBERG stayed in the Philadelphia apartment from March to July of 1941, when ROSENBERG and WALKER were assigned to Camden, New Jersey, where they worked at the RCA plant at the same time.

EPSTEIN was reinterviewed by the above Agents on October 30, 1953, at which time he advised that he had testified before the Senate Investigating Committee, then holding hearings at the U. S. Court House, New York City, concerning his knowledge of the activities of ROSENBERG and his associates. Upon his return home, he had received a telephone call from WALKER. It might be noted that EPSTEIN worked on Saturdays for WALKER'S company at that time. The purpose of WALKER'S call was to discuss the various questions asked by the Committee, inasmuch as WALKER was due to testify before the same Senate Committee.

Concerning JULIUS ROSENBERG, this individual and his wife ETHEL were sentenced to death in April, 1951, in the U. S. District Court, Southern District of New York, for conspiring to commit espionage against the United States, and they were executed on June 19, 1953, at Sing Sing Prison, New York.

SIDNEY GARFINKEL, 92 Virginia Avenue, Freeport, Long Island, New York, admitted that he wrote the following letter to the Internal Security Subcommittee of the Committee on the Judiciary, United States Senate, during the fall of 1957:

"TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

"If you will look into the activities of one Sylvia Aultin, from 1950 to 1955 you will find that there is a strong connection between she and Morton Sobel, both being employed by Reeves Instrument in Project Cyclone...

"She may be known in the party as Eddie or Solma or Sylvia Schwartz or Black. She was the only secretary in the Project Cyclone, and altho she was classified as secret she handled all the typing including top secret papers. She also knew where Sobel went when he ran. She also registered as a democrat and worked for the party at election time.

"Dr. Julius Jaffe, another brother-in-law, is the mind behind all of them. He and his wife have been very active in the support of both Sobel and the Rosenbergs.

INTERVIEW REPORT

Date 3/7/60

Mr. FOMEEN advised that during the 1940s he had met with several Russian nationals at Russian War Relief functions. Mr. FOMEEN advised that after returning from his USO tour sometime in 1945 or 1946, he became concerned in relation to his relatives in Russia. FOMEEN explained that, although he was concerned for their safety prior to this time, he thought it was the opportune time to ask the Russians for a favor in that he had played at several Russian War Relief rallies for them. FOMEEN stated that for this reason he visited the Russian Consulate located in the East 60's in New York City at that time.

Mr. FOMEEN stated that he spoke in Russian and went directly up to the receptionist and stated that he had some relatives in Russia and he wanted to talk to somebody to ascertain their whereabouts and general welfare. FOMEEN stated that he was immediately introduced to ANATOLI A. YAKOVLEV. FOMEEN stated that his association with YAKOVLEV grew from this initial meeting and to his recollection he probably had at least ten to twelve more meetings with YAKOVLEV. FOMEEN stated that during this period of time he thought that if he gave YAKOVLEV a little encouragement he could have gotten requests for work or information from YAKOVLEV. FOMEEN stated emphatically that he was never requested by YAKOVLEV to do anything for the Soviets in the United States. However, he was under the impression that because of the association between himself and YAKOVLEV, if he had given YAKOVLEV any hint that he could be of assistance to the Soviets

1. Dr. IRVING R. WEINGARTEN, 675 Academy Street, New York, New York, advised as follows:

He stated that he knew STANLEY ROBERT RICH as a student at the College of the City of New York (CCNY) who graduated in Electrical Engineering at the same time he graduated from CCNY.

He stated he did not know RICH well at CCNY but that RICH was a member and attended meetings of the Young Communist League (YCL) at CCNY.

He said that he had met RICH in New York City on several occasions after graduation from CCNY in 1938. He believed that RICH had attended a party at the home of his, WEINGARTEN's, wife before the WEINGARTENS were married. He believed that RICH attended this party since WEINGARTEN's wife and girls whom RICH knew attended Hunter College in New York City.

He declared that sometime in the spring of 1943 he met STANLEY RICH in Cambridge, Massachusetts, and he believed this original meeting was a chance meeting somewhere around Harvard Square in Cambridge, Massachusetts. He said that RICH was a civilian and employed at the Harvard Underwater Sound Laboratory.

He said that he and RICH and others associated together in the spring of 1943 occasionally had dinners in the evening.

He said that in May of 1943 just shortly before he was transferred to Boca Raton, Florida he had dinner in a restaurant in Boston with RICH and a group of others. He said that his, WEINGARTEN's, wife was present on this occasion. He recalled that the restaurant was a Chinese restaurant but he could not recall its name or location. He said that after dinner when they were walking away from the restaurant he and RICH were separated from the others. He said RICH told him that he, RICH, could transmit information WEINGARTEN could give RICH to a Russian officer and asked WEINGARTEN would he give him some information for this purpose.

WEINGARTEN, at this point, stated that he was working on radar and said he had not told anybody what his subject was. He said he did not tell RICH he was working on radar.

WEINGARTEN said he asked RICH how RICH knew that anything that he, WEINGARTEN, was working on was worthwhile, and RICH replied that WEINGARTEN could leave that to RICH to decide.

WEINGARTEN said that he replied in the affirmative to RICH's request. He said that he wanted to know how far this would go and what would happen thereafter.

WEINGARTEN declared that RICH had the reputation of being a big talker. He said that just after this he and RICH departed from each other, and he never saw or heard from RICH again.

WEINGARTEN stated that this matter had bothered him for many years.

He stated that on several occasions he had looked up professional directories and had been unable to locate RICH and did not know where he is or has been located.

He asserted that he had never told anyone about this approach by RICH to him but said that in 1946 when he was moving from the Boston area to New York City he asked to the person who took over his apartment and who he knew to be connected with the CP whether the CP had authorized any other persons in the Party to ask

He recalled that some time after February, 1937, and certainly before 1940, he was present at a party with STANLEY RICH. He stated that this party was held in New York City and was at the home of RHODA SERASHUN (phonetic). He said that RHODA SERASHUN subsequently married EDWIN M. IDIS who had also gone to City College of New York (CCNY). He said at this party, probably after his graduation in 1938, he recalls that RICH was talking about what WEINGARTEN later knew as radar, and was also mentioning what WEINGARTEN later ascertained to be a degaussing process.

WEINGARTEN said that he did not recall where RICH was working at the time but thought that it was strange that anyone would mention these matters at a party and in the hearing of other people.

WEINGARTEN stated that with regard to the occasion in Cambridge, Massachusetts, in May, 1943, when RICH told him he could transmit information to a Russian officer, this occasion was after a dinner. He recalled that the dinner was probably a farewell dinner as his group of Army Air Force officers had completed their course at Harvard - MIT and were going to other assignments. He said he did not recall how many were at this particular dinner which took place in a Chinese restaurant in Boston, but believed that First Lieutenant ADRIAN BLUMENFELD and his wife BEA were present. present was one GOLDFIELD, whose first name WEINGARTEN did not mention. He said GOLDFIELD had attended City College and was in some kind of a business in the Boston area at the time. He stated that GOLDFIELD is now located in the Plainfield, New Jersey, area. WEINGARTEN remarked without elaboration that RICH and GOLDFIELD were the only "leftists" at the party.

He stated that he recalled that RICH borrowed $1.00 from him at this dinner and has never paid him back.

He said that RICH prefaced their private conversation, at which nobody else but RICH and himself were present, with a remark that he had something special he wanted to talk to RICH about.

WEINGARTEN said that he had seen some Russian officers on the Boston streets in that time and understood that they were attached to the Watertown arsenal there. He said he thought first when RICH mentioned that he could transmit information to a Russian officer that those were the persons meant.

He declared that he had been officially advised while staying at Harvard - MIT on radar that all the equipment on which they were working had already been officially given to the Russians.

He reiterated that after the conversation with RICH he had never been contacted by RICH or anyone else concerning this matter that he had discussed with RICH and his affirmative reply to RICH's query.

He advised that he returned to the Boston area in 1944 and remained there as an Air Force officer until 1946, but that he made no attempt either then or at any time to get in touch with RICH or to find out where RICH was located. He said that he had no indication that RICH directly or indirectly had ever looked for him. He said that he had subsequently seen GOLDFIELD in the Plainfield area in New Jersey.

NY 105-71796

WEINGARTEN said that he was unable to place the date of this contact with RICH other than it occurred in May, 1943, and shortly before his transfer to Boca Raton. He said that he was unable to recall the name or location of the restaurant in which the dinner was held.

WEINGARTEN said that RICH may have been living alone during this period. He reiterated that he did not know whether RICH was married at this time and stated that no woman was with RICH on the occasion of the dinner.

With reference to his ever mentioning his conversation with RICH in 1943, WEINGARTEN stated that he mentioned it to EDGAR M. IDUS in a very veiled manner and without mentioning RICH's name. WEINGARTEN said he, in hypothetical terms, asked M. IDUS a question to the effect, whether the Communist Party ever asked its members for information on confidential matters and what a person should respond if so asked. He said that M. IDUS indicated that this would be a decision for the individual to decide.

WEINGARTEN did not place the time of his conversation with M. IDUS except to state that it occurred after World War II.

Dr. IRVING R. WEINGARTEN, 675 Academy Street, New York, New York, advised as follows:

He said that prior to the approach by STANLEY RICH to him for information for the Soviets, he had met RICH in Cambridge, Massachusetts, about three or four times.

He said he knew nothing more concerning RICH as a Communist except that RICH had been a member of the YCL at City College of New York (CCNY).

He said that he assumed that RICH's approach to him for information was based on the fact that RICH knew that he had been a Communist. He said that there had been no preliminary approach by RICH or any other person for information and that the proposition of RICH was "out of the blue".

He reiterated that he could not place the time and place of RICH's proposition to him beyond that it was in May of 1943, and after a dinner in which several people were present, but nobody was present except RICH and himself when RICH asked him if he would furnish information to him. He said that after he hesitated and finally answered RICH's query affirmatively, RICH said something to the effect that somebody would be in touch with WEINGARTEN or that WEINGARTEN would hear from RICH. He said that there was no mention of any payment for the information. He said that RICH made his approach in a serious manner and that while he did not know what to make of it, he assumed the proposition was seriously made. He said that he received no information from RICH that any other individual was supplying information to RICH. He said that GOLDFIELD, who had been present at the dinner, was not present at the time of his conversation with RICH and he did not believe that any other person had overheard their conversation. He said he did not know how well RICH and GOLDFIELD knew each other except that they had known of each other since their student days at CCNY.

WEDGARTEN stated that he definitely recalled that RICH had borrowed a dollar from him at the time of the dinner allegedly on the ground that RICH was short of money. He said that there was no provision made for a specific meeting or for the arrangement of some signal for a future meeting.

He added that he had never tried to get in touch with RICH again and that RICH, to his knowledge, had never tried to get in touch with WEDGARTEN. He said that he was never approached at any other time for information regarding his work or his knowledge, by any person connected with the Communists, or anyone connected with the Russians.

He said that he had never mentioned the matter of RICH's conversation with him to anyone but his wife, and in very veiled terms, to two other persons. He identified one of these persons as MAURY BLUM who later became the District Organizer for the Communist Party (CP) in the Boston Area. He said that his exchange of apartments with MAURY BLUM, when BLUM took over his apartment in Dorchester, Massachusetts and he took over BLUM's apartment in Woodside, New York, was not arranged through any Communist auspices. He said that his parents had advertised in "The New York Times" for an apartment in the New York City area for him and his wife, somewhere around January, 1945, and a response to this advertisement was received by him from BLUM. He said that when he met BLUM and BLUM admitted being a Communist in a higher capacity, that he asked BLUM whether a Communist would ever be used for espionage. He said that BLUM answered him, that of course this was out of the question. He denied meeting BLUM at any time after the exchange of apartments in January, 1946.

WEDGARTEN stated that he had also mentioned the RICH approach to him without specific mention of the name of the man or other circumstances, to EDDIE NAIDUS. He explained that he knew he had known NAIDUS from the Ilmwood Section of Manhattan before the war, and that his wife and NAIDUS' wife were known to each other. He said that NAIDUS had been in the YUL at CCNY though he was several years older than he, WEDGARTEN, was. He said that NAIDUS was a chemist and had worked for the government in some civil service job before the war. He said that NAIDUS was not in the military service. He said that in response to a question to NAIDUS as to what a Communist would do if he were asked for espionage

STANLEY ROBERT RICH

RICH was interviewed at Hartford, Connecticut, on August 28, 1950, by Special Agents (SAs) LEO FRUTKIN and JOHN HARRINGTON. He stated he engaged in "leftist activities" at College of the City of New York, from which he graduated in 1938, and participated in many student rallies such as advocating aid for Loyalist Spain and maintenance of academic freedom. He said he eventually became president of the College of the City of New York (CCNY) Tech Council and in this capacity spoke for Loyalist Spain at a rally conducted by the Young Communist League (YCL).

On September 3, 1950, RICH was reinterviewed by SAs EDWARD H. MURPHY and WILLIAM H. BOOTH, JR. He stated that at CCNY he became a member of the Steinmetz Club. This organization became affiliated with the YCL and a unit of that organization. He said he attended open meetings and those closed to members only but denied he was an officer of the organization. He denied ever having joined the Communist Party (CP) or attended a meeting of that organization. He stated he was not a leading functionary in the YCL. He recalled attendance at closed meetings of the YCL of JULIUS ROSENBERG, HERTON BOEHL, MAX LITZNER, WILLIAM DANZIGER and NATHAN SUSMAN. He said that WILLIAM KUTTERPERL was possibly observed by him at closed meetings of the YCL but could not be definite on that point.
